COMING UP AT CAMP

Bagel Brunch: Sunday August 11 at 10:00AM at the LacShack. With the refrain of "Stayin' Alive" as our theme song, this week's Bagel Brunch will bring our community together to outline some critical issues regarding the future directions of UJPO and Camp Naivelt. As apparent in last weekend's Music Camp and Peace Tea, we have a rich heritage of politics, nature, arts, progressive thinking and most of all, community. This fall, UJPO will be celebrating its 85th anniversary, and it is time for us to ensure that the next 85 years will be as vibrant, relevant and sustainable as the first. At this week's Bagel Brunch you will find some great treats and you will hear from the Location Working Group, the Strategic Planning Committee and each other. What is important to you and your family? How should UJPO be addressing a new generation of current and potential members? Where does Camp Naivelt fit into this picture? Please join the UJPO Board to add your voice as Ronit Little, Paula David and Julia Barnett will outline some of the issues, challenges and next steps to ensure "Stayin' Alive".

Alarm Her Majesty: Performing Saturday evening at 8PM at the Lasowsky Centre, is a Toronto-based folk band looking to revive the intergenerational sing-along tradition of the left. The band blends banjo, cello, guitar, fiddle, mandolin, piano, percussion and vocals to provide contemporary interpretations of protest songs. From Woody Guthrie and Pete Seeger to Tracey Chapman and the Clash, Alarm Her Majesty draws inspiration from folk, blues, pop and punk.

The band takes its name from the antiquated section 49 of Canada's Criminal Code which makes it an offence to alarm Her Majesty the Queen, reflecting its playful yet militant approach to social justice. Alarm Her Majesty is an autonomous collection of young musicians from across the country, and is affiliated with the Law Union of Ontario. Its members are Meara Conway, Mae Jane Nam, Brendan Jowett, Andrew MacIsaac, Safia Lakhani, Luke Brown, & Jesse Gutman. It is a solidarity band that appears at local community events and struggles, and includes a mobile flying squad available for march and protest events.

RECAPS

Music Camp Concert: Neither stomach flu, nor rain, nor heat, nor darkness or early mornings, nor hugely varying degrees of skill and talent will stay the Camp Naivelt Music Camp from accomplishing its appointed task, which would be delivering the music.

Delivering the music was exactly what happened down at the Lak last Saturday night when the camp participants put on a very enjoyable concert for a packed house. As he seems to do magically every year, Martin Van De Ven skillfully merged a motley collection of musicians from the kids in the percussion section Esther, Simon, Micah and Zohar through to the experienced talents of Alan, Andrea, Barbara, Paula, Evan, and Charna and the precocious abilities of Nevine, Gabriel, Simone all the way down to Robert who began the camp by trying to blow into the fat end of his saxophone. Nevertheless the Klezmer themed concert was enthusiastically received.

Faith Nolan led the choir this year, which also had a great turn out, in a rousing collection of new songs and some old lefty classics and then culminated the whole evening with the audience singing in a giant circle a First Nations chant about empowerment. A chant Faith learned through her work with aboriginal women in prisons (a subject she spoke passionately about during a workshop she gave during camp week). Everyone really seemed to have had a good time.

Many thanks to Barbara Morris who worked tirelessly and wore many hats to help music week happen and also to Martin and Faith and all the campers for a fun week and great Saturday night concert.

RECAPS, CON'T

Women in Prison: Faith Nolan took an hour from a busy week with the singers at music camp, to share what she has learned from over 30 years of volunteering in women's prisons. Faith shared Black Panther Angela Davis's critique of the Prison Industrial Complex which, according to Davis, began as a source of cheap labor after the slavery was abolished. That economy persists today, with Aboriginal people and people of Colour still vastly over-represented in the prison system. Prison-based work on licence plate and clothing manufacture, and even call centers, paying wages of 14 to 25 cents an hour.

"It costs $137,000 a year to keep one woman in jail," says Faith. Meanwhile, corporations like the security firm Wackenhut, and mass caterer CARA, make huge bucks out of the prison system. Food for one woman costs $30-$50/day, and it's not great. One of the songs Faith wrote with female prisoners is called "green baloney."

The closing of mental health facilities effectively transferred many former patients to the prison system, and pharmaceutical companies have been cashing in: "About 55% have mental health issues going in," says Faith. ""98% are diagnosed and medicated in prison."

Rape is not rare, and women are still subjected to frequent strip search (which Faith pointed out is a form of rape) and handling and surveillance by male guards. Women prisoners have been known to give birth in chains, and newborns are taken from their mothers.

Drugs are the biggest issue that keeps women in jail. They are almost always self-medicating from the pain of abuse. Most were jailed for "non-contact" crimes: "In 30 years, of visiting prisons, I've only met two Homolkas," said Faith. Those who are charged with serious crimes, have usually been defending themselves from abusers. To stay out of jail, "All women need are jobs and peace."

It's a pretty bleak picture, but, says Faith, "We will overcome—we have no choice!" She suggested ways to help: to work for sane drug laws, and maybe become a "thugger-hugger" (the guards' name for prison volunteers) yourself: "If you're a teacher, a musician a writer, if you do hair, dance, yoga, etc. come in and share it."

Faith is compiling a collection of songs she wrote in collaboration with women prisoners. You can help her to fund it by going to her website and prebuying it online. You can also buy some of Faith's great CDs online.

RECAPS, PART III

The Peace Tea: Year after year, the Naivelt Peace Tea is tremendously gratifying, and this year was no exception. We were grateful to have as speaker Sharmeen Khan, who currently works with CUPE 3903 as well as the Canadian Association of Labour Media. She is also an editor with Upping the Anti, a Journal of Theory and Action. She spoke about the Bangladeshi building collapse, and was very knowledgeable and informative, as evidenced by the large number of questions she entertained from the gathering afterwards. Naivelters can participate with action as well, with donations for the Maquila Solidarity Network, at maquilasolidarity.org.

The tea was also a great pleasure on an aesthetic level, with beautiful flower arrangements provided by the coordinator of the tea, Marina Sokolova. With the help of many volunteers, the tables were pretty, the sweets were tasty, and, to make things even rosier, the cleanup was a breeze. Many hands truly made light work. Congratulations to all on a very successful tea, once again.
